6:00 PM

This free event will provide insight and viewpoints from a diverse panel consisting of New Jersey education leaders, an administrator, a Charter School teacher as well as a parent who are all dedicated to bringing quality education to the students in our state. Held during National School Choice week, the panelists hope to shed light on the idea that parents do have a choice in finding the best possible experience for their students, because each child deserves a challenging education that provides a level of joy and engagement that not only meets that child's individual needs but inspires a life-long learner.
